Furthermore, we see that every church has elders (plural). Elders are supposed to rule and teach (1 Timothy 5:17). The biblical pattern is that a group of men (and elders are always men) is responsible for the spiritual leadership and ministry of the church. There is no mention of a church with a single elder/pastor who is in charge of everything, nor is there any mention of congregational rule (although the congregation plays a part).

All ministries of the church are Spirit-filled and Spirit-driven. Ministry Leadership within the Roman Catholic Church The word "ministry," as we use it, is relatively new to the Roman Catholic lexicon. It reflects a deepening appreciation of the significance of baptism/confirmation for the life of the church vis-à-vis the role of the laity.

Reflections — The Theology of Ministry Leadership

A theological treatment of leadership is offered through an exegesis and socio-rhetorical critical analysis of the Christological hymn of Philippians 2:5-11, along with the application of the common language in this theological treatment.

TOWARD A THEOLOGY OF LEADERSHIP

However, the global and cultural expectations placed on leaders in all spheres of vocation demand that Christians have a unique answer that draws from our understanding of the nature of God, reflects the person of Christ, and is guided by the Holy Spirit. This is the conversation that the Theology of Leadership Journal hopes to spark. Much like the journal's logo, it is the editors' hope that theology and leadership will create a spectrum that bleeds into each other.

Online Lay Training for the Local Church The duty to be theologians is common to all of us. The difference between lay men and ministers is the difference not of kind but of degree, for the Bible was given to all the church. It is the responsibility of all Christians to know God's Word in order to be His faithful servants.

Pastoral leadership creates space for the congregation to face the future and discern God's leading and direction. It is easy to believe the pastor should solve a local church's challenges or to identify the future. Yet it seems that God often works through the vehicle of the congregation as much as through the pastor.
