The Burning of Bridget Cleary - RTE.ie

Bridget Cleary was an Irish woman killed by her husband in 1895. Her death is notable for several peculiarities: the stated motive for the crime was her husband's belief that she had been abducted by fairies with a changeling left in her place; he claimed to have slain only the changeling. The gruesome nature of the case — she was either immolated while still alive or set on fire immediately following her death — prompted extensive press coverage. The trial was closely followed by ...

Bridget Cleary - Wikipedia

Angela Bourke's work in Irish folklore primarily explores the use of fairy phenomena and women's roles within the Irish public and private landscape. Her book, The Burning of Bridget Cleary, is, at the moment, one of my prime texts for the work I'm pursuing. However, throughout this book and within her individual essays and articles,...

Burning Bridget (Part 1) - The Irish Times

In 1895, poor Bridget Cleary was the last woman in Ireland to be burned as a witch. Her story is a sad and terrible one, which I could only deal with writing about in small doses. She endured so much suffering through no fault of her own, was gruesomely murdered, and in the end was not even allowed a Christian burial.
